HARMONY JUNIOR U.F.A. PROGRAM 1934

Officers: Pres., Lige Scott; Vice-Pres., Margaret Shattock; Sec.-Treas., Marion Carrington; Advisor, Mrs. R. D. Allen.

Our Creed: Keep us O God from pettiness; let us be large in thought, in word and deed. Let us be done with fault-finding and leave off self-seeking. May we put away pretense and meet each other face to face without self pity and without prejudice. May we never be hasty in judgment and always generous. Let us take time for all things. Make us to grow calm, serene and gentle. Teach us to put into action our better impulses straightforward and unafraid. Grant that we may realize it is the little things that create differences, that in the big things of life we are one, and may we strive to touch and know the great, common human heart of us all, and O Lord God let us not forget to be kind.

Meeting at Avondale School on September 18th.

U.F.A. AND U.F.W.A. OF CAMROSE HOLD CONVENTION AT FORESTBURG

One of the Largest and Most Successful Gatherings in the History of the Association

(Contributed)

The party papers are chalking at the problem confronting the U. F. A. government due to the insistence of some of its influential supporters that some system of social credit be incorporated in the U.F.A. platform before the next election. That a satisfactory system of social credit—call it the Douglas or Aberhart or whatever name you wish—can be worked out for a single unit such as the province of Alberta is questionable. It appears that Major Douglas says it can't. Mr. Aberhart says that it can. At any rate the idea has gripped enough of the people of Alberta to make the politicians sit up and take notice. Mr. Woodsworth champion of the C.E.P., is reported as having said something to the effect that he is not such a fool as to believe that the Aberhart scheme would work. Some of the Aberhart followers, on the other hand, say that Mr. Woodsworth shows a lot of woeful ignorance to talk that way, as there are—in the meantime—all parties have reasonable feel not a little worried about the drama events are taking and members of the government are not the only ones who may be feeling anxious over the situation—Let the Representative practiced at the present time. It is interesting to note here that the convention passed a resolution recommending the U.P.A. to further investigate the Douglas system of Social Credit as it is believed by an ever-growing number of thinking people, not only in Alberta but throughout the world, that the Douglas System of Social Credit offers one of the best solutions of our present difficulties.

The convention was unique from the standpoint that this was the first occasion on which the junior organization joined with the seniors. The Juniors first held a separate session and in the late afternoon they entered the convention hall when they were given a rousing reception. Harry Hanson, of Bawlf, junior director, then introduced the president, Lawrence Blades, the vice-president, Miss Doreen Andrews, and the secretary, Miss Beebe, all of whom responded in a pleasing manner.

Mrs. Zipperer, U.F.W.A. Director, brought greetings from the women's section and gave the interesting information that Camrose Federal was the banner constituency in the province so far as membership was concerned. A. G. Andrews, M.L.A., and A. L. Sanderson, M.L.A., also addressed the convention. C. H. Ronning, M.L.A., owing to sickness, was unable to be present.

A number of interesting resolutions were passed and which will be sent on to the annual convention in January. However, two resolutions were passed and the convention asked that they be mentioned, viz., expressing regret that the province had lost the outstanding ability and devotion to the public welfare of Hon. W. J. Brownlee and Hon. O. L. McPherson, and it wished to go on record expressing appreciation of the services rendered by these two men and wishing them every success for the future.

W. T. Lucas, M.P., gave his annual report and in a two-hour address ably dealt with changing world conditions and the need for the adoption of new methods to enable all the people to participate in the great abundance of plenty which the power machine age has brought about. Mr. Lucas gave it as his opinion that the root of our trouble could be traced to our present monetary system and that radical changes would have to be made so that the people would be enabled to make greater use of the abundance which they have learned how to produce instead of the wanton and ridiculous destruction which is being done.

It was the largest gathering he had ever addressed at a country point.

Mr. Love had a number of charts from which he clearly showed the financial position of the province and he effectively answered the extravagant statements which are being made by certain members of the Liberal party. Mr. Love was listened to with rapt attention and at the close of his address was given a wonderful ovation by those present.

Mr. J. E. Brown, U.F.A. Director, also addressed the evening session and stressed the great necessity of keeping up our U.F.A. organization and the whole-hearted support of our U.P.A. paper.

Mr. Wm. Irvine, M.P., with great regret was unable to be present.

The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

Establishment of a wool scouring plant, valued at $50,000, capable of handling the bulk of Alberta's annual wool clip, is now available for the province, according to authoritative information available at Edmonton. Just where the plant will be located is not yet decided. Four locations are being considered by the eastern firm handling the proposition, namely, Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat. One of the main considerations is proper railway facilities for both inward and outward shipments. The annual wool clip of the province runs between 3,500,000 and 4,000,000 lbs. The largest proportion is produced in southern Alberta, but there are a number of important producing areas in the central and northern parts of the province. It is stated that the financial arrangements for the plant have now been completed, and that installation can be commenced as soon as a definite location is arranged. The proposition is being closely studied by the provincial trade commissioner's office at Edmonton.

Death provided a tragic ending to a pleasant picnic party on the banks of the Beaverlodge river, near Hythe, when Frank Watkins Phillips, aged 49, was drowned while bathing Wednesday night. He was a fairly good swimmer and it is believed a heart attack or cramps caused him to lose control of himself. He attempted to swim across the stream and was observed by others of the party to sink beneath the surface when in mid-stream. His body was recovered five hours afterwards.

Wainwright: The 15-year-old youth has not arrived at Wainwright, nor has word of him been heard since he left home. The boy's description has been broadcast over the radio, and circulated by R.C.M.P. detachments along the line.

Two Edmonton youths have left home under urge of the wanderlust lately. Most boys get the urge at some time or another, but in the meantime parents are anxious.

SPORT PEEPS

Edwin Wenstob, "The Viking Boy," stepped into the big tent on Friday, August 31st, against Verquin, claimant for the Light Heavyweight title of France. Not for years and years has Edmonton seen a boxing fest on par with this coming event. Mike Kaplan's promises the same something worth while while in Wenstob, who has been training faithfully in the Y.M.C.A. gym under expert coaching. Local fans know Wenstob has the ability to hit with the force of a mule's hind member. And who better to Verquin if he allows himself to be the target for just one of those haymakers. Dupre introduced Wenstob to the boxing world; Kaplan is polishing him in ring generalship. And if Wenstob gets the decision on the 31st he will undoubtedly be classed as one of Canada's real contenders. Expectations are that a big group of local sports will be to Edmonton to cheer Wenstob to victory.

Freight shipments to Great Bear Smith portage increased by about 40 per cent over last year in the same period. The total being 3,500 tons to July 1. This is the result of tremendous activity in the new mineral area. Both the Hudson's Bay company and the Northern Transportation Company have found it necessary to increase the size of their shipping fleets in the north.

Charles E. Garnett, vice-president of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, who has recently paid a visit to the area states that the richness of some of the veins of silver there is almost unbelievable. "Some of the samples taken from the widths of veins run as high as 2,000 ounces of silver per ton," he said.

Sportsmen in all parts of Alberta will be pleased to know that Ruffed grouse, which have been on the prohibited list, may be shot from October 1 to 15 this year, both dates inclusive, according to a change in regulation.

For the first time in the history of the convention held an evening session, when the Hon. J. Russell Love, provincial treasurer, addressed a crowd of 1,000 people.

It was the largest gathering he had ever addressed at a country point.

Mr. Love had a number of charts from which he clearly showed the financial position of the province and he effectively answered the extravagant statements which are being made by certain members of the Liberal party.

Mr. Love was listened to with rapt attention and at the close of his address was given a wonderful ovation by those present.

More farmers and others this season are producing honey in Alberta than ever before, according to S. O. Hillerd, provincial apiarist. There are now approximately 1,000 beekeepers in the province. The total honey production this year will be 1,000,000 pounds and over, it is estimated.

Threshing has commenced in the Hughenden district, and one farmer, William Finnian, started on a 100-acre field of Marquis wheat Friday. Of good yield, it graded No. 1 northern at the elevator. Mr. Finnian is one of the oldest settlers in the district and nearly always first to thresh.

The Checkerboard And Peace

"Britain's frontier is now the Rhine." This statement, made in the British House of Commons by Stanley Baldwin while acting premier during the absence, in Canada, of Ramsay MacDonald, and used to epitomize his plea for extension of Britain's aerial fleet, thrust into vivid prominence the altered status of the mother country in regard to her European neighbors. Development of aircraft by continental powers has banished that security from hostile attack guaranteed heretofore by a powerful navy and the "chalk cliffs of Dover". Automatically, her frontier has been pushed outward step by step with the growth of foreign air armadas and the increasing range of potential enemy aeroplans.

Synchronizing, as it did, with the disturbing sequence of events which preceded and followed the assassination of Chancellor Dolfuss of Austria, the debate in the British house startlingly revealed the extent to which the atmosphere surrounding the European scene had been impregnated with fear of war. No wonder Britain's statesmen are perturbed; no wonder the chancellors have been striving to secure some effective guarantees of territorial integrity among the storm-racked powers of Europe!

The fear of war can be traced directly to the militarization of Germany under Adolf Hitler, and the obvious ambition of Nazi to extend the sphere of German influence until the Reich becomes dominant in European affairs. Prior to the Austrian embroilery, a concerted movement had been launched in Europe whose objective was (and is) effectively to curb Nazi ambitions of territorial expansion, west, east and south. The western frontier, marching with France and Belgium, had, of course, been "guaranteed", by the agreements contained in the Locarno treaty of 1925. Germany, France, Belgium, Great Britain and Italy had agreed, individually and collectively, to guarantee the inviolability of the Franco-German and Belgio-German boundaries as defined by the Treaty of Versailles. There had also to a complete demilitarization of German territory west of a line drawn east of the Rhine.

Agreements with respect to eastern boundaries, however, were not sanctified by as far-reaching commitments and mutual guarantees. It is true, there was a network of arbitration treaties involving Poland, Czechoslovakia, Germany and also France, but the Reich would not go so far as to accept as inviolate and permanent her eastern border. In fact, the hope has been cherished assiduously in Berlin that sooner or later there would come a revision of the German-Polish boundary which would restore Danzig and the Polish Corridor to the Reich. It is this rift in the lute of peace, diplomats of Europe are now seeking to close by means of what has become known as an "Eastern Locarno".

The "Eastern Locarno" pact now proposed calls for a mutual assistance agreement involving Russia, the Baltic States, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Germany, and would provide mutual guarantees of their respective frontiers and for mutual aid against an aggressor seeking to upset the status quo. As Germany is the only nation fundamentally opposed to the present territorial setup, the real meaning of the "Eastern Locarno" is apparent.

The actual significance of the proposed treaty is that Nazi Germany's ambitions would indeed be curbed. If Berlin signs (and it has been put squarely up to Hitler), it would mean voluntary acceptance of her present boundaries, all around. It would mean definite renunciation of the Polish corridor and German claims to Upper Silesia. It would mean the stabilization of Europe in its present form. That apparently, is the key move to peace on the European checkerboard.

Apparently, too, "Locarno" is the formula of peace upon which European chancellors pin their greatest faith. In addition to the "Eastern Locarno", a similar treaty, known as the "Southern Locarno", designed to preserve the Mediterranean status quo and involving, probably, Turkey, Italy, Greece and Yugoslavia, also is mooted.

Curbing Crime

Feminine Crusade Against Crime Started in United States

A feminine crusade against crime—designed to eliminate depredations of the Dillinger type—drew commendation from the United States department of justice.

The crusade has been given tremendous impetus recently by powerful women's organization.

"Women can play a most important part in the curbing of crime," said William Stanley, acting attorney-general.

"They can compare the form of government with their locality with the form in localities where not so many crimes are committed. We plan to set up a central bureau to furnish such information."

"If they find an unusual amount of crime, it is certainly indication that there can be improvement. They can demand improvement."

Correct Definition

A Sunday school teacher of modernistic tendencies was telling his class that the miracles recorded in the Bible were not to be taken literally. "My impression is . . ." said he. Then, by way of testing their knowledge of words, he asked, "Can any of you tell me what an impression is?" "Please, sir," said a shrill voice from the corner, "an impression is a dent in a soft spot."

Some Odd Professions

Many Queer Ways of Earning Living In India

Apparently, the West has not the sole monopoly of queer ways of earning a living, for the following extract is taken from the current Census Report, an official publication of the government of India, and shows that there are in India such odd professions as those practised by: Sellers of Grasshoppers, Potters of Water on Gods, Averters of Hailstorms, Suckers of Bad Blood, Setters of Gold Nails in Teeth, Breakers of Dead Bullock Horns, Cradie Swingers, Professional Identifying Witnesses, Charity Receivers on Burial Grounds, Drivers Away of Epidemics by Charms and Ear Wax Removers.

In addition, the Census tables reveal that altogether there are 37,775 people earning their living as horoscope casters, astrologers, wizards, witches, mediums and fortune-tellers.

Few People Escape Attacks Of Summer Complaint

Summer Complaint may be slight, or it may be serious, but you can't help it, it seizes you, holds you, and allows the profuse diarrhoea, the vomiting and bleeding to continue for a day or two, and you may become weak and prostrated.

Just as soon as you feel any looseness of the bowels go at once to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and check this unusual action before the weakening looseness can get started.

Hotels In Sahara Desert

Had To Be Taken By Camels In Small Parcels

As the French penetrate further and further southward into the Sahara, pacifying the roving Arab tribes as they go, hotels are being erected for the accommodation of government officials, visiting army officers, business men and the occasional venturesome tourist.

The hotels had to be taken south through the desert in parcels.

Each parcel weighed about 200 lbs., and was one camel-load. Caravan after caravan, travelling 45 days through the sands, brought to Timimoun, in the far south of Algeria, the many tons of windows, doors, glass, china, linen, cutlery, furniture, electrical installation and other equipment needed for the local hotel.

Neither foremen nor European laborers would agree to go there, so the place was built by French army engineers, who themselves had to trace in the sand the first outline of the building because the superstitious wild Arabs of the region feared The Evil Eye, and would not have anything to do with blue-prints. They did consent to make the mud bricks, however, which form the walls, and to draw up to the site the date-palm trunks forming the roof beams and girder-work.

The rest had to come in parcels. Even the ships of the desert bringing the parcels were temperamental. They would not travel on even such good hard roads as were to be found along their line of route, but had to be steered over soft sandy courses. Camels suffer from bad spells of foot soreness unless allowed soft tracks.

Drouth In South Dakota

Guards Patrol Water Holes In Western Part Of State

Instead of fat cattle and bumper crops the water famine has brought gaunt beasts and meagre yields approaching a crop famine in South Dakota, the estimates of agricultural experts showed.

Already the federal government has sent $26,600,000 into South Dakota for drouth relief since September, 1932. This sum is exclusive of corn, hog and wheat benefits and cattle purchases. Yet debts exist, mortgages are held on cattle and land.

C. J. Borum, agricultural statistician of the state college of agriculture at Brookings, estimated winter wheat would run about 4.5 bushels to the acre. Forty-two thousand acres remain out of 296,000 acres which were planted.

Japan Develops New Art

Sculptography, by means of which persons or objects may be photographed in solid form, has been developed in Japan. Sculptography's greatest contribution to science, according to its sponsors, is in replacing the human element in the making of sculptures where exact likeness is more important than the artistic element. Just as photography replaced painting for such purposes, so sculptography has replaced ordinary sculpturing.

Model Hospital System

Irish Free State Using Sweepstakes To Further Project

With $15,000,000 spent and an equal amount awaiting distribution, the Irish Free State hospitals envision an early day when they will be the envy of the world's surgeons and medical research workers.

Ambitious plans for the permanent endowment of the hospitals of the country are being laid by the hospitals commission. The help of the League of Nations' health section has been invited so the commission can have the best advice at the laying of the foundations of the project. Twelve sweepstakes have already been held.

The hospitals commission, a body headed by Michael Doran, former chief European engineer for Henry Ford, controls the vast sums which have been painlessly raised in every corner of the globe and prevents haphazard extensions by existing hospitals so as to prevent waste and overlapping. While allowing sufficient cash to trickle out of the fund for current needs the commission is proceeding with its task of evolving a model hospital system for the Free State in which every institution will be co-ordinated with its neighbor.

Soviet Buying Arms

Newspaper Claims Shipments From England Going To Russia

A London newspaper says that it is able to reveal that the record exportation of arms from Great Britain, amounting to £482,246, was due mainly to orders from Soviet Russia.

The arms consisted largely of machine guns and munitions. More than three-quarters of the total found their way to Russia.

The permission of Whitehall had been secured for these large shipments.

The reason for these rush orders is that Russia is feverishly buying up the products of the world's armament factories in readiness for the struggle she believes is approaching with Japan.

The armaments business is phenomenally busy.

Although the figures stand so high they would have been much larger owing to insistent demands from Paraguay and Bolivia, but in these instances applications for licenses by the munitions manufacturers have been turned down by the foreign office.

Flags Raised Huge Sum

Kitchener Flag Collected $150,000 For World War Fund

Flags which raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for helpless soldiers and refugees during the World War have just been presented to the Australian government by Edward Solomon of Melbourne. They are to be hung near the National War Memorial at Canberra when it is completed. The most treasured relic in the collection is the Kitchener flag which alone raised $150,000. It is an Australian flag, which was sent nearly 200,000 miles and twice around the world to collect signatures. It was signed in the trenches by Joffre and Haig. A star from it was sent to Admiral Jellicoe, which he signed and returned for sewing into the flag. The autographs of the King and Queen were later added.

Finally the flag was sent back to Australia where it was raffled in 1918.

Canada's Industrial Prairies

Report Shows Western Provinces Are Becoming Industrialized

Canada's prairie provinces—Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta—are rapidly becoming industrialized. While these provinces often referred to as "The Bread Basket of the World", are famous for their output of agricultural products, at the same time manufacturing plays an important part.

According to a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, in 1932 the three prairie provinces manufactured goods with a value at the factory of $187,451,377. Establishments engaged in manufacturing numbered 2,687 and represented a capital investment of $354,450,263. These plants provided employment to 38,964 workers who received salaries and wages totalling $42,435,765. The value of materials purchased totalled $92,247,846 and the value added by manufacture amounted to $95,203,531.

Flour and feed mills led all industries with an output valued at $246,761. Slaughtering and meat packing followed with products worth $23,704,599. Other leading industries were butter and cheese to the value of $15,754,928, central electric stations $15,693,275; railway rolling stock, $12,014,633; petroleum products, $11,058,020; printing and publishing $8,787,444; breweries, $6,359,259; printing and bookbinding, $4,417,145.

Sir John Simon, British Foreign Minister, Denies He Is Of Jewish Origin

Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, denied he is a Jew. Sir John wrote the denial to a correspondent who had drawn his attention to statements current in Britain and abroad that the foreign minister was of Jewish origin.

At the same time Sir John expressed his denial would not be distorted to make him appear sympathetic with anti-Semitism, an attitude he regards as "un-English" and which he "utterly condemns". The minister's correspondent had mentioned reports that Sir John's ancestry had powerfully influenced the national government since he became foreign minister.

For the month of June exports of cattle to the United Kingdom were approximately 500 head smaller than for June, 1933, the movement being affected by market conditions, but for the first seven months of the year the number of cattle exported to Great Britain exceeded last year's corresponding period by 1,343 head.

Interesting Items Gleaned From Many Sources

There were 36,863 less hogs graded in Canada for the first six months in 1934 than in the corresponding period of 1933.

When salting cucumbers, a layer of dill and a handful of mixed spice may be placed on the bottom and top of the crock.

The cheaper cuts of beef should be used in making soup, both because of their low cost and because they come from those parts of the animal which are richest in extractives.

Bacon exports to the United Kingdom continue to make headway, and the movement to date this year is very far ahead of that for the corresponding period of last year.

On July 14, 1934, 15 geldings, 23 mares, 18 steers, 11 heifers, 6 cows, 6 bulls, 3 stallions, and 1 herder horse, all strays, were in the various official pounds of Alberta.

The British Crown colony of Trinidad and Tobago, with which Canada does an increasing trade, is the largest in area of any of the island colonies in the eastern group of the British West Indies.

A road will soon be graded in the surface to make it dry. This also assists in preventing the escape of the juices.—Beef Bulletin, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

The demand for honey in all the principal countries of the world arises from three main sources: (1) from domestic consumers; (2) from various manufacturing trades, confectioners, bakers, chemists, etc., and from the catering trade.

According to the regulations governing fruit trading in Canada, the phrase "properly packed" means that apples, pears, plums, etc., are not slack in the receptacle, or overpressed; or in a condition which is likely to result in permanent damage during handling or transit.

No fruit of any kind intended for sale shall be packed in any package other than the packages prescribed under the regulations of the Fruit and Honey Act, 1934, for each individual kind of fruit, except that where packages are not identified as for an individual kind of fruit, they may be used for any fruit.

Attention has again been drawn by the Livestock and Meat Trade Review, published by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, to the evil of overloading the Monday livestock market. Such action is a direct snub to the law of supply and demand, and not among its least evils is that it largely affects cattle of a value least able to support marketing costs, adding further costs to the carryover.

OCCASIONAL WIFE

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Author of "Joretta", "Lipstick Girl" Etc.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to find work for her. Peter is young, bright, energetic, trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money which she could have had by studying commerce in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter; Syria Tamm, Peter's mother; and Gus Matisse, his former room-mate with whom he has quarreled. After a party at an exclusive club, when the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to celebrate the engagement, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another girl are standing near them. This makes necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Camilla urges Peter to accept some of her savings to help him along, but Peter returns the money. Avis, however, Avis has gone from the studio, Avis Werth calls and persuades Peter to accept a loan of $1,000. Peter finishes his exhibit and asks Avis and Camilla for suggestions as to a name for it. Camilla suggests "Land of Youth," and Avis "Inspiration." Peter adopts the latter title and Camilla, heartsick, goes to Peter's studio to quiet and think. Peter and Avis follow her to an art gallery where lights are turned on, see the statue has been shattered to pieces. Avis accuses Camilla of doing this, and Camilla, stunned by the disaster, and hurt and horrified by the accusation, faints.

At Camilla's suggestion, Peter enters as his exhibit a statue he had sculptured especially for her as a "wedding gift." They named it "Land of Hope."

Camilla's advertising campaign and Tiny Tots broadcast was a great success, and Hoyt, impressed by his piety and sense of humor, learns that Camilla was the author and artist who was so ably stimulating business for his company.

Peter's exhibit was awarded the Paris scholarship, and he prepares for his journey to France.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER LVI.

"I want you to be the very last person I see when the train leaves," Peter had told Camilla, when they planned for their last day together.

They had dined festively at Charn Cottage, their happiness tempered with the ache of memories and the apprehension of the future. But, for Peter's sake, Camilla staunchly thrust aside her fears for what lay ahead and committed herself ostensibly to this exquisite joy of the moment. She scarcely took her eyes from Peter's sunny face, storing up in her mind a living picture of it to take out and look at often in the lonely year ahead.

They talked of trivial things, jested gayly, as if a threnody of sadness did not accompany their thoughts. They lingered over their macaroon glace and demi tasse, as if it were not five short hours before they would part for one long year.

They walked slowly in the crisp chill of the late autumn evening to Peter's dismantled studio in the Annex Building, as they had done on their wedding day four months before. It was then that Peter dropped his mask of cheerfulness and said wistfully, holding her in his arms with his face pressed to hers:

"I wish you might have gone to New York with me, at least, to see me sail."

"Two days more isn't so much out of a whole year," she consolingly said. "And I think it might be even more difficult for both of us. When I see you leave on the train, I can try to make myself believe that you're not going far and won't be gone for long. But to watch a boat carry you down the river and over the horizon—she sighed.

He crushed her close and her hand went up to caress his face. "If only you might go with me!"

"Which is impossible," she added, with a dull finality which left them both silent for awhile.

His trunks had gone, his Gladstone bag stood in readiness beside the door, like an object of evil taunting and challenging them both from the shadow beyond the arc of light from the shaded lamp.

And then, with a sudden speeding up of time, they were at the station in the midst of the clamor of roars, shrieks, bells, voices, laughter. They were no longer Camilla and Peter Anson, wife and husband. They were separate entities, soon to go their separate ways, and confused for a few brief moments with the conflicting forces of humanity.

Camilla watched the gate man punch Peter's strip of ticket and tear it in half with the casual indifference of a doorman at the theatre tearing off the ticket stub which gave you the privilege of being amused for a few hours. What a different significance the return of this half ticket had! It gave Peter the right to go to the other side of the world and stay away from her for a year.

She went with him into the Pullman car, found his berth—upper—seven. "That's a lucky number to begin with, even if I am on the upper," he laughed. "But I shan't always take the way of least expense, you bet. Some day, you and I will have a drawing room when we travel."

"Of course," she agreed.

"And you will try to come over in the spring?"

They had talked that over many times, but they floundered for things to say that would fortify their cheerfulness.

"Before we know it, your work will be going splendidly and we shall be writing about where and when you will meet us!" she promised again.

The clamor outside increased, late arrivals followed hurrying porters into the car with their luggage. Peter glanced at his watch for the tenth time. "Guess you will have to go, precious. I'll take you to the platform."

They single-filed through the aisle and corridor, descended to the platform.

"I'd take you into the station, but I don't dare. Can't afford to pay for another upper on the next train," his smile was strained.

"That's what I came to the train for, to see you off. I'll watch the train out of sight until the tail-light blinks 'leerily,'" her voice trembled a little in spite of herself.

"All aboard!" sang the porter.

Peter's eyes plunged down into hers and held them for a breathless moment. Their arms clung to each other and their lips lingered in a long kiss.

"Have to go, sweetheart," he murmured.

They parted reluctantly as the train began to move. Peter sprang onto the step, followed by the porter, and stood waving his hand as the train gathered speed. Camilla waved back, dashing the tears from her eyes so that she could see his face more clearly. Bright, blown nostrils and sunning mouth blurred together, became a tall figure moving swiftly into the distance. The clicking rails echoed, hummed. And with a last jolting wink, a red light on the observation platform blazed out.

Camilla turned and walked back through the station, got into a taxi and directed the driver to her apartment. She felt numb, lifeless, empty. Part of her had gone away.

Peter stood at the steamer rail, looking down into the sea of faces and the chaos of a pier at a ship's sailing. All the confusion of sounds and sights and odors swirled about him. He was detached, seeming to be no part of it, just watching with interest. He was thinking how different his landing in this great harbor must have been, almost a score of years before. He had arrived there, frightened, bewildered, clinging to his mother's hand.

And now, by the results of the skill with which he had reproduced that occasion in clay, he was returning across the sea in honor, confident, serene, alone. For a moment, he wished that his mother might know what he had done. She always had talked to him of going "back home," yearned for it and begged him to go sometime, even if she could not. He would, he promised himself. It was possible that he would go to Stockholm from Paris before he returned to New York, but he could not plan definitely for that yet.

A bell clanged. Activity increased. People hurrying aboard and others hurrying ashore. Tears and laughter. Kisses, caresses—sober faces, happy faces. Press photographers and reporters rushing to and fro. Women in smart clothes wearing bright corsages of flowers. To some of them, this sailing was an occasion of their lives; to others, it was just another tiresome departure.

Bells, shouts, running feet. The gangplank raised. Frantic waving of hands and calling farewells. The pier drawing away from the huge steamer, disappearing into the distance. Boats passing, puffs of steam about the distressed mother hens that had hatched ugly ducklings now turned into swans and didn't know what to do about them, freight-boats slipping by, the skyline of the city looking like a picture of towers and spires against a dull gray sky, dissolving in the fog.

The Statue of Liberty slipped by like a phantom in the mist, an hallucination that never had been real. And so these hundreds were returning whence they—or their ancestors—had come.

Peter stared down into the lacy foam of the disturbed water, recalling the stoic little smile on Camilla's face when it had receded into the distance at the station. He wished that he might have seen her again. But perhaps it was just as well that she had not come to New York. He would have meant for her a lonely journey back.

But, he resolved, there was nothing to be gained by yearning for Camilla, now. He had to right-about-face and make the best of what was ahead of him. As if the act would follow the thought, he turned about and walked down the deck toward his stateroom. Best to get settled for the week, and perhaps he could get some work done.

The days would be long and lonely even if he were friendly with his fellow passengers. He might have made the passage in five days or a faster steamer; but again, he had to consider the cost—tourist deck, inner stateroom on a slow boat.

As he turned into the corridor, he was suddenly—if he were already seasick and perhaps even delirious. A strange sensation engulfed him and he put up his hand over his eyes with a vague gesture, as if he were seeing a vision.

"All aboard!" sang the porter.

Peter's eyes plunged down into hers and held them for a breathless moment. Their arms clung to each other and their lips lingered in a long kiss.

"Have to go, sweetheart," he murmured.

They parted reluctantly as the train began to move. Peter sprang onto the step, followed by the porter, and stood waving his hand as the train gathered speed. Camilla waved back, dashing the tears from her eyes so that she could see his face more clearly. Bright, blown nostrils and sunning mouth blurred together, became a tall figure moving swiftly into the distance. The clicking rails echoed, hummed. And with a last jolting wink, a red light on the observation platform blazed out.

"Waiter," he called, "is this all you have to-day?"

"Yes, sir," said the waiter, whose term of service expired at the end of the week.

"Why, there's nothing on the menu to eat—absolutely nothing," said the diner. "Bring me the manager!"

The waiter smiled.

"Very good sir," he said. "How would you like him—grilled or fried?"

Search For Treasure

Young Englishman To Explore Lost City Of Sheba

In search of treasure hidden in the mysterious lost city of Sheba, once ruled by the glamorous queen, a young Londoner of 22 is setting out on a long trek into the Arabian desert.

He is Norman Stone Pearn, who has recently returned from a 2,000-mile camel expedition across the Sahara.

Millions in gold, silver and precious stones, are believed to be hidden beneath the shifting sands which wiped the great city of Sheba from man's ken over 2,000 years ago.

"It is going to be a difficult trip with lots of risks," said Mr. Pearn.

"The Arabian desert is one of the hottest places in the world, and one may die of thirst there in 24 hours. fierce brigands lurk in its wastes, and lost trails mean almost certain death."

"Years ago Sheba was the centre of the trading routes across Arabia. In the reign of the great queen it was a city of luxury.

"At the death of the queen the city began to decline. It became overrun with thieves and brigands, and traders avoided it until Sheba became a forgotten city and the desert sands gradually obliterated it."

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

OF JOY

Though sometimes long I woo it, This joy beloved of all, It may not heed my pleading Or answer to my call.

Then, like a swift wind veering, Its touch is on my life, More light than breezes tosses Petals Yet keener than a knife.

I know not where it goes; Though with me, it is fragrant And Vivaldi as a rose.

It sends no forerunner To say when it will start; And all I know of joy is Its singing in my heart.

A Port For Freighters

Reason Liverpool Could Afford To Build Mersey Tunnel

Liverpool, which has just inaugurated the longest under-river tunnel in the world, was once a greater name in the world than it is now. But it is still a greater name in the United States. For us it grew dim when Liverpool was supplanted by Southampton as the terminus for the crack Atlantic liners.

The principal occasion on which Liverpool now emerges in the news is late in March, every year, with the running of the Grand National Steeplechase. Otherwise it is the general impression here that day has come upon the once great seaport on the Mersey.

The seafaring community would hardly treat itself to a new $40,000,000 subtitle tunnel. Liverpool, as a matter of fact, is still the second port in Great Britain, next only to London. It is true that Southampton has come up only one-fourth of Liverpool's tonnage and now has three fourths, but Liverpool's ocean trade is still worth five times that of its rival.

The de luxe passenger liners go to Southampton. The freighters go to Liverpool. That is why the city can afford the great Mersey tunnel and the magnificent new Liverpool Cathedral.

Made His Own Place

Prince Of Wales Has Endured Himself To People

It is one of the many practical advantages of King over President that there is no sharp break of personalities. The people learn to know and love the son while the father reigns, and love for the one confirms the other in a humane and natural succession. Our Prince, however, is not merely deputy to our King; he has made for himself his own sphere of work. The unemployed have learnt from him the Royal solicitude; the Social Service League, which he founded, seeks to fill their vacant hours and to give them, where work cannot be found, at least occupation. The cobbling of shoes, the planting of gardens, the making of simple furniture, even the building of houses—such useful arts have given new hope and new interests, in many cases, to the lives of the unemployed.

The State may maintain the workhouses in life; but it requires the Royal touch to add something of cheerfulness and humanity.—London Morning Post.

Britain's Hall Of Records

Girl Wanting Job There Has To Pass Difficult Tests

If a girl wants a job at Somerset House, Britain's hall of records, she must be able to:

Describe the changes in a frog's egg from the time of deposition to the time of hatching and give some indication of the duration of this period of the frog's life from her own observations.

She would then be considered fit to levy surtax.

On the other hand, if she can:

Give a concise account of the respiratory organs of a mammal she would probably be considered an expert on death duties.

These are but two of the questions in the examinations for posts at Somerset House.

Women for these jobs—which carry a salary of $5,000 a year—are recruited from the stars of girls' public schools.

The following specimen questions are included in the examinations:

Explain how your muscular and nervous systems will enable you to write the answers to this examination.

Describe the morphology of the tadpole at the stage when it most nearly resembles a fish and indicate the essential points of similarity and difference.

What types of subjects make the most effective films?

India To Pay Homage

Princes To Attend Silver Jubilee Of King George's Accession

Fifty elephant all gorgeously decorated; the famous "South of India Star Diamond"; 30 yard ropes of pearls—these are a few symbols of the glamor of the east which India will send to London next May, when some of her former native princes will come to celebrate the silver jubilee of the King's accession.

The 60 elephants, wearing jewels belonging to the 27 chief maharajahs, are to take part in a brilliant procession in London's streets.

It is reported also that a court lady engaged by the Maharajah of Benares will come to London to present her blessing on Their Majesties.

The famous diamond, the "South of India Star," second only in importance to the Kohinoor, will be worn in his turban by the Kaeekwar Baroda during the ceremonies; and the Maharajah Sindha of Gwalior will wear his magnificent state robes with ropes of pearls amounting to 30 yards in length.

Emeralds and other jewels said to be worth $500,000 will be worn by the Maharajah of Patiala.

Little Helps For This Week

"Beloved let us love one another, for love is of God, and everyone that loveth is born of God and knoweth God." 1 John 4:7.

To the innermost of life is taught, The mystery, dimly understood, That love of God is love of good; That to be saved is to be this.—Salvation from our selfishness.

J. G. Whittier.

The Spirit of Love, wherever it is, is its own blessing and happiness, because it is the truth and reality of God in the soul, and therefore is the same good to itself everywhere and on every occasion. Would you know the blessing of all blessings? It is this God of Love dwelling in your soul and killing every root of bitterness which is the pain and torment of every earthly selfish love. For all wants are satisfied, all disorders of nature are removed, no life is any longer a burden, every day is a day of peace, everything you meet becomes a help to you, because everything you see or do is all done in the sweet element of Love.—William Law.

Errors Have Been Made In Copying

The Bible

Remarkable changes made in copying the Bible are revealed by the Sinai Codex, according to Dr. Percy Dearmer. While preaching recently in Westminster Abbey he said:

"The Codex shows that the full name of the robber who was released was Jesus Barabbas; and the awkwardness of his having the same name as Christ proves that here we are on the bedrock of history. The copyists soon left out the word, not realizing its critical importance." The Bible version is (St. Matt., ch. xxvii, v. 17): Pilate said . . . "Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, Jesus which is called Christ?" Even more important is the fact that Christ did not say, "He that believeth not shall be damned."

"Why, I'm surprised at you putting out your tongue at people," said a Jarow mother to her little daughter the other day. "It's all right, ma," returned the child, "it was just the doctor going past."

"Say lady, do you know how to drive a car?" asked the local police as he was crossing the street. "Oh, yes," she replied sweetly, "What would you like to know?"

"I see your girl has let her hair get dark again," remarked one of the boys to a fellow at the dance. "Yes, she's gone off the gold standard," was the reply.

"I've found husbands for several women in this city," said an Edmonton man to a visitor. "What, are you a matchmaker?" the visitor asked. "No, I'm a detective," came the reply.

RUSSIAN WHEAT SITUATION

(Annual Average Wheat Production 880 Million Bushels)

It is estimated that since 1916 the population in Russia has increased by at least 25 million persons, which means that Russia's annual requirements of wheat are at least 125 million bushels per annum.

1916 is not accurately known, but it is estimated that the average annual production for the past two or three years has been very little, if any, greater than it was before the War in 1915 and 1914. Thus it will be seen that Russia easily requires all the wheat she is able to produce for the use of her own people. Russia, therefore, should not be on the average, a serious competitor in world wheat markets.
